CONVICTS IN MILITARY SUITS

No More Stripes For First Termers In New York Prisons.

Albany, N. Y., Oct. 1.—The 2,354 first term inmates of the four state prisons have taken off the striped suits, which for years have been the characteristic garb of convicts, and put on a new dress, which has about it nothing hitherto suggestive of prison life.

The new prison suits are of dark gray cloth, of texture similar to that now worn and of the same color, but without the stripes. They are cut in semimilitary style, with standing collars, and the coats are to be worn all ways buttoned. The cap has a peak somewhat shorter than the present prison headgear. The cloth is woven at Auburn and made up by prison tailors to fit the individual. The cost is about $5 per suit. The prisoners which have received the stripeless clothing are Sing Sing, Auburn, Dannemora and Jayanoch.
